SPECULAR HOMES OF SOUTH FLORIDA

From an early age, Carlos Adharsingh excelled at drawing and painting. He studied architectural drawing and drafting in his native Trinidad, then relocated to Miami to study interior design at the International Fine Arts College and communication and media arts at St. Thomas University. Today, he is listed in Who's Who in Interior Design, and has been a designer on call at Design Center of the Americas since 2005.

It is my passion and privilege to be in the field of interior design. Carlos Terence Adharsingh

From Key Biscayne to Naples, he handles a mix of residential and commercial projects including condos, houses, offices and restaurants. He makes it a point to meet with his clients on site so he can determine how to make the most of what they already have. With a quick repositioning of a mirror or a change of light bulb for a crisper light, Carlos is able to demonstrate on the spot the difference even the simplest changes can make. Suddenly, the process becomes more real to his clients; less abstract. They relax and become more involved, which Carlos prefers since it gives them a true sense of ownership of the project.

With his easygoing nature and ability to connect one-on-one, Carlos inspires trust in his clients. In one large-scale project, his clients were moving from a six-story brownstone in New York City to a five-bedroom house in Key Biscayne. The challenge was to make the large, dark furniture that had been so well suited to a Manhattan brownstone equally effective in a Colonial Plantation-style house on the water in Miami. After Carlos met with them in New York City, his clients left the design of their Florida house up to him.

When they entered their new home three weeks later, their belongings had been entirely reinvented for Miami. Formerly imposing furniture had been lightened up through reupholstering, and decorative accessories had been streamlined. Their antique furniture was given prominent position. The addition of sisal rugs, plants and flowers in the interior courtyard, and simple sheer silk panels at the windows enhanced the tropical effect.

Carlos' goal is to have clients feel at home in their own home. With his hands-on, positive approach to design, it's something he often hears.
